ABRAHAM LINCOLN - A BIRTHDAY TRIBUTE

Rabbi F. M. Iserman

Abraham Lincoln does not belong to the United States. He belongs to humanity. Just as Socrates is not the sole property of the Greeks, but the property of all thinking men, just as Isaiah is not the sole possession of the Jew, but the possession of all religionists, so is Lincoln not only a hero of the United States, but a hero of all nations. Genius, spiritual, artistic or intellectual transcends the confines of geographic limitations. Genius defies the limits of nationality. It is the flashing forth of the human spirit. It is the vanguard of humanity. It is the soul of the race. It expresses itself through individuals, who tower above the masses, among whom they live, as majestic mountains tower over the foothills at their base.

These individuals belong to no one nation. They are the heralds of an advancing humanity, the voices of a new morning, and are the cherished possessions of all mankind. Of this race of cosmopolitan heroes, Lincoln is a member. His whole life seems as wonderful as a tale from the Arabian nights. His rise from obscurity to the leadership of a nation, his rail-splitting days, his struggles in the wilderness, his menial occupations, his poverty and later on his power, his eloquence, his mastery over the English language, and his successful fight to preserve a great nation and to emancipate the black man, culminating in his tragic end, seem almost too marvellous to be true.

He seems more like a legendary figure than a historical character. It seems as if a fairy's wand transformed this uncouth pioneer into a great statesman. His lips, filled with the homely talk of the backwoodsman, were by some magic touch transformed to speak eternal truth in unsurpassable form. His hands, coarse and callous, made to wield the axe, the hammer, and the spade, became the hands which held the helm of a nation, and over reefs and shoals, steered it safely to its destiny.

If the American people would build the America of Lincoln's visions, their reputation among the family of nations would be secure.

SING SING'S WARDEN AND THE DEATH PENALTY

Lewis E. Lawes, warden of Sing Sing Prison, who has had twenty-five years of practical prison experience, has written a book entitled "Life and Death in Sing Sing." In it he voices a plea for the abolition of the death penalty. It is only after years of experience, and after having personally supervised some two-hundred executions, that Warden Lawes has come to believe that it is an error on the part of the state to take the life of human beings. His predecessor Thomas Mott Osborne held similar views. We quote from Warden Lawes' book:

"Why did pickpockets, for whom detection meant death, ply their trade at public hangings in the very sight of the gallows? Why do states which have the most legal executions also have the greatest number of homicides in proportion to population? Why do those states where lynchings are most frequent also have the greatest number of murderers? If the fear of death is a deterrent, why is it that a man will commit murder in prison, where the chances of escaping detection are one in 10,000? . . ."

"There are very few who murder coldly, deliberately, remorselessly. What few there are present the same problem as the dangerous insane and must be controlled in the same manner. We do not advocate killing the insane because they are dangerous or difficult to handle . . ."

SERVICE

A synagogue has just been established on the top floor of a sky scraper on Wall Street. All the best appointments have been installed, including a full complement of dignitaries and functionaries. The lower east side has been scoured for a choice staff of clerics and quasi-clerics.

We presume that the new floor of worship will belong to the orthodox wing. Reform Jews indulge in religious exercises only on Sundays. Orthodox Jews, on the other hand, often feel that it is worth while abstracting a few moments from their business on Saturday mornings to do the fair thing by their religion. And no doubt there will be enough kaddish—sayers in the broker's offices to make up "minyonim" all week whenever the market is in swing.

It is conceivable that a ticker service, or even a board, will be provided either in the synagogue proper or in ante rooms to keep the members posted on the latest developments in the market. Imagine what the cantor's or rabbi's life would be worth without such installations, if because of a few special trills, or sermonic flourishes, he prolonged the services and kept worshippers away from the scene of action while some startling "move" was on! It would not be surprising if telephones were attached to each pew so that the patrons might be enabled to keep in communication with their brokers.

Who knows but that some day we may see a little synagogue equipped in one of the sky-scrapers in the down-town section of Toronto. During a "bullish" spasm, there will always be a beaming and grateful lot of Israelites praying to their Lord who made the wonderful universe with all its mines and "industrials." And wouldn't it be thrilling to see some ladies auxiliary stage a parade along Bay Street to celebrate the presentation of a scroll to the synagogue in the financial section.

PASSPORTS IN THE U. S.

The American Congress has deferred the adoption of the Aliens' registration bill passed by the Senate until after a public hearing is held of the arguments in favor of and against the measure. It looks as if it is only a matter of time before this bit of legislation will be enacted and put in force.

Under the provisions of the proposed law, every alien will be required voluntarily to register and carry with him a certificate of registration. Very likely the registration will be optional but the carrying of the penalty for non-compliance will be obligatory.

This will be another step by the United States in the direction of the methods and ideals of pre-war Germany and Russia. In order to differentiate between aliens and natives, it will be the necessity for the latter to carry some form of certificate, which will mean that they will have to register as well as the aliens. Presumably also it will be required of all registrants to have their photos attached to their certificates, and perhaps as a further precaution to have their fingerprints taken and recorded.

Well, every time we read of those wild extravagances in the United States we thank heaven that Canada is a British country still governed in a measure by British traditions and ideals. Signs of these are not lacking as they experience from time to time among the arrogant Americans the unthinkable in the more sane and moderate country of Canada. A.R.R.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

He lived and Accomplished Nothing

A merchant in Trenton, N.J., died the other day and ordered that his tombstone bear this inscription under his name—"He lived and accomplished nothing." This merchant in all probability, was honest about his own life. And I admire him for telling the truth about himself. Post-mortem truth it is—but rare indeed! I do wonder, however, what untruths the officiating clergyman pronounced about the life of this merchant!

Eulogies

The above paragraph suggests that I write something about the many untruths told by ministers in delivering Eulogies. Eulogies are very very common these days. The family of the departed dear one insists, that the minister speak about the dead. And of course, one necessarily can only speak kindly of the dead. And the Rabbi trying to be kind, does often pronounce unkind truths; which disgust those who are—spiritual minded and honest to goodness sincere religious folks.

When there is nothing exceptional in the life of an individual, why in the world pronounce meaningless phrases and adjectives as to the charitableness, and kindliness of the dead? I know Jewish tradition, and Jewish tradition has ever been opposed to the practice of "Hespedim." An Eulogy in the old Jewish life was only delivered when the deceased was in truth an outstanding man in the Jewish community—a learned man—a man of Torah, and of clean hands, and pure heart. And the wealthy man—just because he was wealthy, did not merit a "Hesped." But if that man of wealth labored in the cause of Israel—then and then only did he merit the public Eulogy. Rabbis ought even risk to obtain disfavor with their rich congregants, and not deliver meaningless Eulogies over men who were of no particular service to mankind. The Rabbinate in turn will again respect a dignity.

The Disappearance of Home

It is to be regretted—"the home" is swiftly and noiselessly vanishing. Mechanical creations, such as the automobiles, and movies, are somewhat responsible. Parents are, as a result, restless—they cannot stay in the house at least one evening a week, and get to know the little ones. And I am sorry for the children these days! Many of them, though they have parents—are spiritually "Orphans." The maid is supposed to "mother" children—more often, the maid "smothers" them. I hear the voices of children crying in these days, for fathers and mothers. I hear the voices of little ones cry aloud—"Mother, come home and spend some time with us. We need you." Beautiful furniture, male and female servants, and automobiles do not make a home. Parents must embrace children, spend a goodly portion—of time with them, and exchange with them true devotion, and love. Alas! today there are many "Sweet houses," but few "Sweet homes!"

The Society for the Prevention of Societies

I have a feeling that it is about time that such an organization, as named above, be brought into existence. Hardly a day passes without a request that I become a member of this or that society. As a matter of fact, I am even offered to be made honorary president, and what not, if I only lend myself to be "roped" in. I, personally, am of the opinion that there are too many lodges, fraternities and clubs in this Western Hemisphere of ours. And if a man be a "loyal" member of every organization to which he belongs—he could spend his days and nights doing nothing else but attend meetings, banquets, and smokers. While society is important—solitude is equally important. The normal thinking mind needs the rest and tranquility which are the result of solitude and meditation. It is good often to get away "far from the madding crowd."

A Letter From a Non-Jewish Student

"Inasmuch as I am not a member of the Congregation of Temple-Emanu-el and consequently have not the privilege of contributing to the support of the Temple and because, although I am not a member, I have been welcomed to the very interesting and enlightening lectures given by the College of Jewish Studies, I am so grateful, so appreciative, that I would like to be permitted to contribute a little more than the amount specified in your letter.

It would take me longer time than I have at the moment to express how much I enjoy the Lectures of Dr. Nathan Gordon and Rabbi Stern. They are just what I have needed to encourage me in my search for truth in Religion, something I have always earnestly sought for, but have not always found.

Thanking you for giving me the privilege of contributing to your Fund for a closing Function."

Toronto's skyscraper king is Harry Rotenberg to whose credit stand seven big buildings, the Federal building, the Sterling Tower building, the National building, the Dominion building, the Capitol building and the Holderlin building. Harry Rotenberg is also actively engaged in the matter of the erection of two additional skyscrapers. One of these will be erected on a site owned by his firm on Richmond St., and the other on a site close to Bay St. in a downtown location. Financial arrangements for the latter building are practically completed. It will be 25 storeys high, contain 160,000 square feet of floor space, and will have private parking accommodation for 200 cars. This building will be the subject of an announcement shortly. In addition to his building activities Harry Rotenberg has always been interested in communal matters. He was chairman of the executive board, Federation of Jewish Philanthropies in 1928; is a trustee of Holy Blossom Synagogue, and a member of many clubs. He was born in Poland in 1884 and came to Toronto in 1895. He is, therefore, considerably younger than New York's skyscraper king and in the next six years may reasonably be expected to rival the latter's remarkable record.

LOUIS GOLDING SPEAKS HERE

Louis Golding, Jewish poet and novelist, author of "The Miracle Boy," brought a large audience at the People's Forum Sunday night into the atmosphere and beauty of the Mediterranean Islands in a lecture "A Literary Wanderer in Enchanted Islands."

The distinguished young writer of the "enchanted islands" as expressed retraced the Odyssey, stressing the literary associations of each scene. Literature, he felt, is so important not merely for its own sake and for the immediate pleasure that it gives, but "because it achieves types, because it represents the whole world in certain fundamental characters." Odysseus keeps coming back, he observed, "as true true to all time."

Mr. Golding halted for a considerable time in his lecture, at "spot, of "infinite literary associations." He described in some detail the literary group to which he became attached there. His associates brought Norman Douglas, D. H. Lawrence, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Compton Mackenzie, Francis Brett Young and others in modern literature before his audience. Here and there he proved to offer opinions of these figures. He said, for instance, that Scott Fitzgerald has done work that justifies a more substantial place in literature for him than many people have been inclined to grant. His "Great Gatsby," for example, he termed "a supreme epic of modern American disillusion."

A large part of his address dealt with Sicily. Before of Greek life in this island still pulsate with life, the speaker thought. This he could not say of modern Greece itself. "It is not merely a sort of museum," he said of Sicily.

Among Black Hand cut-throats in a dark shack in Palermo, the writer said he saw the most impressive rendition of Passion Play he had ever witnessed. This production was a marionette show, and he described "Mafia murderers huddled together" in the primitive theatre "transported" by the story. Mr. Golding digressed here to express the opinion that marionette performers are more vital than puppets of flesh and blood. He justified this stand on the ground that with the marionette player there is no disguising of personalities, as there is in the personality of the human player and the part he plays.

The Jewish Literary and Historical Society of Canada assembled for the first time, Monday night, and signified their intention of being present to hear the speaker, Louis Golding, lecture on "Creative Art in Jewish Life." The Montreal branch of the Canadian Authors' Association will be represented by H. A. Kennedy president, Miss L. M. Bowman, vice-president; Miss G. Lavack, secretary, while the following will also attend: Rabbi Abramowitz, Rabbi Bender, Rabbi J. Zlotnik, A. A. Levin, Ald. Joseph Snowbert, P. Bercovitch, K.C., M.P.P., Louis Fitch, K.C., I. Rallon, K.C., J. K. Morgler, H. M. Caiserman, S. Wiseman, Joseph Cohen, K.C., M.P.P., N. S. Finkelstein, A. J. Levinson.

Every Friday

At the annual meeting in January of the Home Missions Council of the Protestant Churches in America, composed of Board of Home Missions of the United States and Canada, a rabbi submitted a statement on Christian proselytization among Jews in this country which elicited a reply that makes clear authoritatively the general Christian stand on this important subject. The rabbi was Dr. Israel Goldstein, of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, of New York. He requested the privilege of making this statement and a secretary of the Commission on Good-will Between Christians and Jews of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America asked the Home Missions Council if it might be presented to the annual meeting. Only the salient points of Dr. Goldstein's statement can be given here, but the whole paper is a thoughtful, dignified appeal to the Christians to cease their efforts at conversion because of their retarding effect upon better understanding between Christians and Jews.

Dr. Goldstein objected to "missionary institutions established in neighborhoods that are predominantly Jewish where there can be no mistake as to who is intended to be reached, where missionary pamphlets in Yiddish and Hebrew are distributed, where the program is specifically that of seeking the conversion of Jews to Christianity", all of which activities are being conducted by some groups in the Home Missions Council. Dr. Goldstein asked these questions: "Is it morally right directly or indirectly, to cause the alienation of a child's reverence from the faith of his fathers without the written consent of its parents? Is conversion accomplished by inducements such as parties, gifts, medical attention to adults, etc., likely to induce a favorable response to Christianizing influences? Is it in accord with the American principle that Jew and Christian both have great spiritual contributions to make for the ennoblement of American civilization? Is it respectful toward a neighboring faith to seek conversion to Christianity? Is there not a different area for Christian missionary endeavour among those who are born into the Christian faith but have wandered away?" In closing Dr. Goldstein said: "No single act on the part of our Christian brothers would so much tend to cement actual goodwill and understanding between them and the Jews of the country as their decision to stop the unsolicited proselytizing of the Jew."

Now notice how the Home Missions Council reacted to Dr. Goldstein's plea that the Christians take this specific step along the road to goodwill. Of course the Council was polite and gracious in assuring the rabbi of its "hearty co-operation in the cultivation and propagating of good-will, civic righteousness, social service and national loyalty between Jews and Christian citizenship." In replying to the rabbi it went on to say that "when little children of Jewish families come to our churches, Sunday schools and institutions of like character we believe it is desirable that they should come with the consent and approval of their parents. And furthermore we do not believe in the sincerity of men and women to Christianity who bribes or bait." How about children? And after a few more long, fulsome, verbal bows left and right the Home Missions Council points out that it has a duty:

"We [illegible] people has the right to propagate their faith. In all places with the attitude we affirm that the gospel of Jesus Christ is good news for all men. At the very heart of it is the [illegible] command of Christ—Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The gospel is a way to salvation and a way of life for individuals and for the nation. Not to go, therefore, would be a disobedience to a central command of our Master. Not to go to the Jew would be a discrimination against that people from a Christian point of view. The Home Missions [illegible] Board of Home Missions of the United States and Canada [illegible] the right but the duty to present the gospel of Christ to all men and the service of Christ to all men within the bounds of this country and to every human being within the bounds of his opportunity. To do less than this would be unfaithful and unfair to our fellowmen."

In other words the Jew is misunderstood and that they need to [illegible] the efforts of missionary settlements [illegible] are located. This [illegible] Jews want to they can make their own [illegible] enough to keep the baited children [illegible] the message of the flesh represented [illegible] command of Christ [illegible] Commission on Good-will [illegible] attempts to bring about better understanding between Christians and Jews. What can they or Dr. Goldstein or any good-will champion do in the face of the premise which the Home Missions Council recognizes at its starting point? This council is impelled to convert the Jew to Christianity because it considers this work a duty. Not to carry the Gospel to the Jew would be to ill-treat him!! Neither dynamite nor platinum-tongued oratory can avail against such a position as this. And as long as it is maintained it will be one of the reasons why good-will must remain of the significance of a hill of beans.

Durant Success well Merited!

CANADA'S leading financial papers refer to the success achieved by Durant Motors of Canada, Limited, as being "well merited."

The Financial Post of November 2nd, 1928, says: "Durant Motors of Canada, Limited, owes much of its success to the modern and thoroughly equipped plant it owns and operates at Leaside, Ont. . . . the equipment is the most modern and up-to-date procurable." Continuing, the Financial Post says: "The Company owns, absolutely free from mortgage or encumbrance of any kind, some 14 1/3 acres of land . . . and a plant consisting of 10 modern buildings with a floor space of more than 500,000 square feet and equipped to turn out upwards of 175 cars a day."

When the foregoing was published, a new, three-storey office building was under construction and will be completed early this spring; 22,000 square feet of manufacturing floor space and 38,196 square feet of covered storing, shipping and receiving space have been added.

Following is a quotation from another Financial Post article: ". . . The sales organization has extended year by year until now it covers the entire Dominion . . . It is to the loyal dealer organization that the management gives much credit for the splendid sales records of the past two years."

The policies of the Company, as illustrated by the foregoing quotations, form the background for the building, the sale and the servicing of Durant passenger cars and Rugby trucks, and they are in no small degree responsible for the strong and enviable financial and commercial position the Company now occupies.

Durant Motors of Canada, Limited, is most ably equipped to secure and hold the continued confidence of the Canadian people.

It Came to Pass That—

Meeting of the Napoleonic Sanhedrin, 1807.—The Assembly of Notables, under the presidency of Abraham Furtado, had made satisfactory replies to the official enquiries as to the position of the Jew and Judaism in modern life, erring only in the direction of obsequiousness. In order to give their conclusions full religious sanction, it was considered advisable to obtain the approval of a representative body of a more definitely religious character. Napoleon's inherent romanticism led him to model it as closely as possible on the ancient Sanhedrin, after which it was called. Among its seventy-one members, two-thirds of whom were Rabbis and one-third laymen, were representatives of all the provinces of the French Empire, including Italy, Holland, and parts of Germany. After seven meetings, the Sanhedrin voted without discussion upon the replies of the Assembly of Notables, and passed them as laws. The whole was summed up in the ninth article: 'That the Jew is required to consider the land of his birth or adoption as his fatherland.' The other points were principally concerned with a declaration against the practice of usury and a full recognition of the bindingness upon the Jew of the matrimonial laws of the State. Whatever the merits or demerits of the gathering (and it is frequently reckoned as having set the footsteps of French Jewry upon the pathway of assimilation) there can be no doubt that it was a fine stroke of diplomacy and captured the imagination of the Jews far beyond the boundaries of the French empire. As Napoleon himself is reported to have said when he found his arms greatly assisted by them during his invasion of Poland: 'The Sanhedrin is at least useful to me.'

Jewish 'Parliament' in England, 1241.—Writs had been issued by the perennially needy Henry III to the sheriffs of the various counties ordering them to send six representatives of each of the larger communities, and two of the smaller, to meet him at Worcester on the Sunday before Lent, 'to treat of matters concerning their advantage, as well as his own.' This was a mere euphemism for on their assembly the representatives were told that they were expected to raise an extraordinary levy of 20,000 marks from among their people, and that those present would be held responsible in their persons and property for the payment of the full amount. In point of fact, as they were unable to obtain the whole sum within the stipulated time, and the King made good his threat.

FEBRUARY 11TH

Jews defend Vienna, 1211.—During the vacancy in the Empire, King [illegible] was in the city, which was in danger of capture. Although it was the Sabbath, the Rabbis permitted the Jews to take up arms and [illegible] citizens in the walls. This is of some interest as showing that a mediæval community, at least one of the oldest in Europe, was not effectively pacifist in either side against the bearing of arms in the Jews.

FEBRUARY 12TH

Auto da fé at Toledo, 1491.—This was the first ceremony of the [illegible] which henceforth became one of the [illegible] of the social century. No less than seven hundred [illegible] nearly all Judaisers) figured in it, [illegible]. Nevertheless, the ceremony was painful and [illegible] through the city to the Cathedral, [illegible] lighted tapers and surrounded [illegible] from the neighbouring country-[illegible] the precincts of the sacred edifice, they [illegible] the Christian faith, with [illegible] and lost [illegible] before the altar, they [illegible] the Moors, who [illegible] to wear other [illegible] possession on six [illegible] disobedience [illegible] relapse into [illegible] was seldom re-[illegible]

FEBRUARY 13TH

Massacre at Speyer, 1195.—A Christian having been found dead outside the city walls, suspicion inevitably fell upon the Jews. The body of the daughter of Rabbi Isaac ben Asher ha Levi, who had recently been murdered, was disinterred and gibbeted in the market-place, a mouse being attached to her hair as an additional indignity: and it was only by the payment of a large sum that her father succeeded in ransoming the corpse. On the following day, he himself and eight other persons were murdered. The rest of the community took refuge on the balcony of the synagogue, pulling the ladder up after them to prevent pursuit. They remained in this precarious position until their release was effected by the payment of an enormous ransom, when they fled under the cover of night. Their houses in the meantime were sacked and burned. When the news reached the ears of the Emperor, he compelled the culprits to pay compensation to himself as well as to the Jews.

FEBRUARY 14TH

Massacre at Strasburg, 1349.—This was perhaps the most ghastly of all the terrible series of outrages which took place at the time of the Black Death. The City Council was favourable to the Jews, against whose conduct, they said, they had nothing to complain. They had therefore strenuously resisted all proposals to take steps against them. The populace, however, enraged at the fluctuations in the price of corn, found a scapegoat in the Jews, and asserted that there was a conspiracy on foot to shield them. A minor revolution took place in the city government, removing the moderate party. On the next day, the Feast of St. Valentine (Saturday, February 14th, 1349), the mob barricaded the Judengasse and drove the whole community before it into the cemetery, where a huge pyre had been prepared. Only a very few saved their lives by abjuration: The rest, men, women and children (to the number, it was said, of two thousand souls) met their end resolutely in the flames. The new Council decreed that for a period of one hundred years no Jew should be allowed to settle in the city, though barely twenty had passed before they thought better of their resolution. Among the spoil found in the synagogue there was a shophar for use upon the New Year's Day. This fully confirmed the suspicions of the burghers: it was, they said, prepared by the Jews in order to betray the city, by giving a blast upon it to inform their allies outside the walls! For many years after, the 'Judenbles' was blown each evening on a 'Grusselhorn' made in imitation of this, as a warning to any Jews to depart before nightfall and as a reminder to the burghers of their miraculous escape in 1349!

FEBRUARY 15TH

Death of Sarah Copia Sullam, 1641.—She is a person worthy of note as perhaps (together with the Roman, Deborah Ascarelli) the first Jewish poetess of modern times. She belonged to a distinguished family in Venice, and married one of the leaders of the local community. She was early conversant with Latin and Greek, as well as Hebrew, Spanish, and Italian: pamphlet on the immortality of the soul—the only one of her works to and she won distinction by her poems in the last tongue. Her position and her attainments were such that she became the leader of what was almost a salon in the Venetian Ghetto—no doubt frequented by Leone da Modena, who dedicated to her one of his works. In the outside world, too, she enjoyed a great deal of reputation. She was in touch with Antonio Ceba, a Genoese poet, who failed in his endeavour to win her over to Christianity: and in response to the attack of a certain priest she wrote a be published separately. Her epitaph was from the pen of her admirer, Leone da Modena.

We can always guarantee soft water for your family washing — AND soft means soft — because science has evolved a method for taking the hardness out of water. We have that process in operation — and it does make family washes whiter. We have five different family wash services, each one taking the wash one step nearer completion. These are priced accordingly — but all charges are moderate and a saving on home laundry methods. Phone our young lady and let her explain them to you.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Rabbi Isserman's Editorials

"If juries and judges can err in one proved case, is it not possible that there may have been others which cannot now be corrected because the unfortunate man is dead? As a matter of fact, the juries and judges erred in 13 per cent. of the original commitments for murder, first degree; and 51 per cent.—more than half—of these persons were acquitted on retrial as not guilty. Is not the percentage of probable error entirely too high to warrant a penalty that is irrevocable? . . ."

"The further assumption that the murderer is a dangerous criminal from whom society must be protected is flatly disproved by the figures which show that 90 per cent. of the men and women committed for murder, first degree, had no previous felony record. Nor is there a single instance in which a prisoner pardoned or specially commuted for murder, first degree, returned to Sing Sing Prison because of a second homicide. . ."

"Life imprisonment does not present a real difficulty in the control of the murderer. If it did, we would expect to see it reflected in the homicide rates in those states and countries where the death penalty is abolished; in the eight states of the United States and in Holland, Rumania, Italy, Portugal, Belgium, and half of Switzerland. We should expect them to have higher rates, whereas, in fact, usually they have lower rates. . ."

"It is a punishment of absolute finality; there is no opportunity for the correction of mistakes. For that very reason, some juries will not inflict a punishment so irrevocable. I have known several men who have been very close to the chair, and who, afterward, were found to be innocent. Still other men have been commuted to life imprisonment in almost the last moments of their lives. If they deserved commutation, they did not deserve death, and yet they were within a few moments of it. . ."

"Bulwer Lytton truly said: "Society has erected the gallows at the end of the lane instead of guide posts and direction boards at the beginning."
